Exporting animals with care

Let us take the reins on animal transportation

We know that having a safe and quiet environment for livestock, particularly horses, is essential for successful animal transport. At Rickenbacker International Airport, we have the facilities, staff, partners and geography to make animal transportation as easy and efficient as possible while minimizing the stress to your animals as well as your business.

The Rickenbacker difference

We've worked hard to create a process and culture of animal-friendly flying at Rickenbacker. And we care for your animals like they're our own. Here's what you can expect when transporting animals with us:

- Less stress for the animals
- Shorter drive times
- Quieter, less congested airport
- Quality, uncongested roadway system surrounding Rickenbacker
- Handling facility dedicated to animal transport
- Only a five-minute tug ride between the animal facility and plane
- USDA APHIS office only 10 minutes from the airport
- Experienced livestock ground handling by way of Baker Livestock and Horse Transport
- Coming Soon...we are currently designing enhancements to become an Export Inspection Facility for equine

Baker Livestock and Horse Transport

Baker Livestock and Horse Transport is our certified livestock ground handling agent. With more than 25 years of animal transport experience as well as a staff specializing in moving animals, the quality and care they provide are unparalleled. Other services and benefits include:

- Height-adjustable chute for the transport of the horses into the jet stalls, making the transition from the trailer to jet stall very easy and efficient
- Nets, water jugs and shavings for each shipment
- Transportation coordination of grooms from John Glenn Columbus International Airport located less than 20 miles from Rickenbacker
- Coordination services for animal testing, isolation and flight booking
- Inspections at quarantine sites (in some circumstances)
- Custom crate building for any animals

Please contact Larry Baker at bakerlivestock@earthlink.net or at 937-541-7461 to make arrangements for the care and transit of your animals through our facilities.

"I have been in this business a long time and I have shipped all kinds of animals all over the world. I can tell you without hesitation that Rickenbacker offers the absolute best possible experience for animals and their owners throughout this very complex and delicate process."

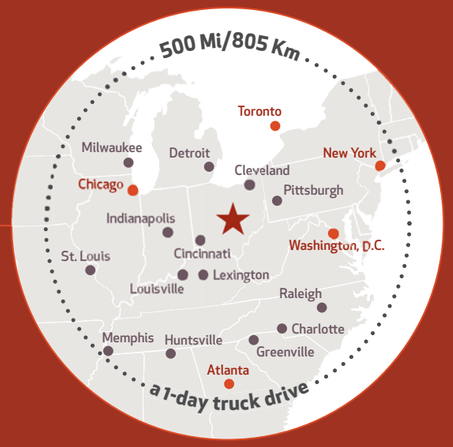
The geographical advantages

Rickenbacker is within a one-day truck drive to nearly 50 percent of the U.S. population and only 190 miles from Lexington, Kentucky, which is about a 3 ½ hour drive in a horse tractor trailer.



Large livestock terminal facility

At Rickenbacker, we have an airside livestock terminal facility dedicated solely to the movement of animals. We've designed this area so you can:

- Enjoy a large space for easy maneuvering (117 feet wide by 130 feet long of open warehouse space)
- Fit an entire tractor trailer inside for secure loading into the jet stalls
- Stay warm in colder months in the heated warehouse
- Keep animals calm in a quiet facility that is only a five-minute tug ride away from the airplane
- Move through access doors that are 20 feet high

Coming Soon...

We are currently designing enhancements to our on-ramp animal handling facility. Phase 1 of the project covers facility improvements, USDA office space and 12 horse stalls, which is looking to be completed by the first half of 2018.

While our project is underway, please contact us for alternative EIF options for LCK.

Making a lot of history in a short amount of time

Rickenbacker International Airport became an approved Port of Embarkation authorized by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 2015, earning permanent status in 2016. The airport's first flight of livestock was on March 13, 2015, with 178 head of pregnant Holstein heifers flown to Thailand to strengthen and grow the country's milk production. Since then, we've accommodated 100's of animals including both Arabian and Thoroughbred horses, sheep, goats, and even an endangered rhinoceros through our facilities.
